To many New Yorkers, fall means beautiful foliage. However, the leaves aren't the only change in color; makeup, nail polish, and hair starts incorporating the latest fall tones. Melissa Hago and Sarah Barnes of Fashion Snoops, an international trend forecasting agency, shared their predictions for colors to look for this fall.

New Yorkers are notorious for sporting perfectly manicured nails. Hago and Barnes recommend trying a metallic teal hue at your next mani-pedi. Other nail styles to look for this fall include neutral, simple nails with splashes of color, rhinestones, or glitter embellishments to enhance the look. Rounded nails, shorter nails, and matte colors will also be making a splash this fall.

In terms of makeup, Hago and Barnes expect the Calvin Klein signature barely there, natural looking makeup to continue its popularity. In order to do the natural look right, its important to use shimmers, mascara, and a pinch of color on your cheeks to highlight your features. Heavy metal hues, such as rose gold, gilded bronze, and gunmetal grays will be covering eyelids and moody lip colors, a 90's throwback, in shades like vampy plum, chocolate brown, and brick red will be seen on pouts around the city. Kismet Cosmetic's velvet lipstick collection offers some of the fall shades, specifically designed to work with your outfits.

Hago and Barnes don't just stop at forecasting makeup and nail trends; they also shared the fall 2015 hair colors to try out. Copper, red hair is expected to be seen city wide and subtler bronze low lights will replace the dramatic ombre shades of the spring and summer. Pastel dye jobs aren't expected to go anywhere, instead the cooler months will inspire icier shades, from cool deep blue to single ice gray streaks for the less daring.
